WELCOME PARENTS

Vice President H. B. Brown

*This is Your Day at Iowa State College
... Make Yourself at Home and Stay as Long as You Can.*

It is a great pleasure to welcome the fathers and mothers of our students who have come for this "Parents' Day" celebration. We hope that you will enjoy talking over the campus with your sons and daughters and that you will find opportunity to meet their teachers and friends. We are anxious to have you visit some of the class rooms and laboratories where your boys and girls are spending the very best years of their lives. The most valuable problems of the state of Iowa are its young men and young women. We are especially happy to have you parents with us at this time.

It is also a pleasure to welcome the thousands of friendly football fans and the thousands of Iowa State College fan club and alumni fans.

We are glad to see those of you, however who are here today, Iowa State the old-fashioned college of education and knowledge. We hope you will find that your college is stronger and better in many ways than it was in your day, and that the best traditions of the earlier days are being maintained. We urge you to keep in touch with your Iowa State and show your interest in her progress by frequent visits. You are always welcome.

CORNHUSKERS vs. CYCLONES

A more ancient football rivalry than that which exists between Iowa State and Nebraska would be almost indeed. The Cyclones met the Cornhuskers first in 1886 when the earliest sport was a match of tennis and polo-mance and have played them every year with a few exceptions since.

That first contest went to the Huskers, 11 to 8, but the Cyclones had contributed to say so to the affair of '87. In fact, they said it 11 to 7, with Nebraska on the losing end.

The games of '84 and '86 proved to bring the matter of an even balance, as Nebraska brought the first and 20 to 10, while the Cyclones involved with a 10 to 0 defeat the following year—the only winning victory was administered by the Cyclones in the Huskers.

Nebraska took revenge in 1888, with a game played at 1887, resulting in a straight win of eleven which went up until 1906 the first year of the Harvard game when the Cyclones presented a team that was truly a Cyclone. In the Iowa State lineup were Rogers, a general full-back, and the Lambert brothers, a pair whose studies both gave the Huskers an efficiency of twelve. When the Iowa Cyclones stepped blowing that day, it left the Huskers in the tank with 2 points, while Iowa state had 14.

The annual rivalry of 1907 was one of those important affairs in which Nebraska played the victory through by the tight margin of three.

It. The Cyclones led the wings until late in the last half when John Walker of Nebraska scored a 40-yard kick from placement squarely between the uprights for the winning margin. This kick has been referred to by many writers as the most phenomenal kick in football history. It was kicked in the face of a howling gale.

Although the majority of Nebraska Iowa State series have been close the Huskers have won 11 of the 27 games played, Iowa State won 8, while one contest ended 4 to 4. The point total stands 440 for Nebraska and 351 for Iowa State.

In recent years the series have been comparatively close. In 1927 the Cyclones defeated the Huskers by a 14 to 13 game, Nebraska winning. In 1928 the Cyclones played at Nebraska at Lincoln for the Big Six championship and lost 10 to 13. Last year the final score was 11 to 4 in the Huskers favor.

Today's game with the Cornhuskers is of unusual importance as it marks the opening of the 1929 Big Six football campaign for both teams and is the first Big Six game played this season.

Both teams composed of freshmen from previous years. The Huskers coached by Coach University last November, while the Cyclones have George of Central College and the University of Illinois.

BEAT NEBRASKA LAST IN 1919

Not since 1885 have the Cornhuskers whipped the Crimson, but that year a tight line fighting Iowa boys drove Stanford back much faster opponents, too.

The Cornhuskers played the Stanford linebackers the first half but failed to reach their objectives until near the close of the second quarter. Suffering at reaching the goal line for keeping the ball, Stanford boys broke through back and sent a dropped kicking directly over the crossbar from the 35-yard line.

Not to be denied their valiant effort, the Cornhuskers fought the second half and scored all around scoring points by the Stanford.
